Research Interests

My research agenda is focused on the mechanisms determining human capital investments in and by children and young people. I have analysed several large administrative and survey datasets including the National Pupil Database, HESA Student Records and the Longitudinal Study of Young People in England under secure conditions, developing expert skill in causal analysis, and have managed the data security, management, and linkage procedures for longitudinal primary survey data collected on undergraduate students. I have a strong record in disseminating policy-relevant work to non-academic audiences
