SKILLS, KNOWLEDGE AND EXPERIENCE

For over two decades, I have worked on a wide range of social science data infrastructure projects and services, funded by various UK research councils and the European Commission. I am expert in managing complex and technical developments (including major cross-site and cross-national collaborations), alongside managing people, projects, contracts, budgets, risk and relationships.

In my current and recent posts, I have gained substantial leadership experience, setting and leading strategy for projects and teams. I have a strong set of project management skills, frequently applied to data-driven projects, and hold a PRINCE2 Foundation certificate.

I am an experienced communicator, with over 100 presentations given at conferences, meetings, and other knowledge exchange events over the past 10 years. I have authored papers, reports and technical documents for a variety of audiences and written and edited extensively for the web.

On a daily basis, I am a user of MS Office software (Word, Excel, PPT, Outlook), and I am familiar with social science data analysis software (SPSS, Stata), web development environments (HTML, CSS and various web content management systems) and project management/collaboration platforms (e.g. Redmine, Trello, Confluence).
